Information Brochure

What is ADESSA?

(Associated Distributors of Educational Supplies in Southern Africa)

ADESSA is an independent association, formed in 2003, to represent educational suppliers in their dealings with government department, educational institutions and other interested parties. It is funded by subscriptions from member companies.

What does ADESSA do?

ADESSA aims to:

- promote sound and ethical business practices
- ensure high quality and good value in products and services for education
- communicate effectively with government, fellow members and educational institutions
- promote best practices for the use of Information, Communication and Technology (ICT) in education
- encourage and foster strategic partnerships

What are the benefits for members?

ADESSA members enjoy:

- enhanced credibility with schools and government
- access to up to date information about educational needs
- a voice in local and national government departments
- networking with others in the educational industry
- special negotiated discounts for exhibitions
- preferential exposure through provincial departments

How can ADESSA benefit education?

ADESSA members are:

- committed to reliable service and support
- able to provide relevant tools to enhance South African education
- aware of the needs and requirements of the curriculum
- established, ethical companies (not 'fly-by-night' operations)
